In this exclusive interview, Chris Heath talks to Pet Shop Boys about their career, their music, and their plans for the future.

The Early Years

Pet Shop Boys were formed in London in 1981 by Neil Tennant and Chris Lowe. Tennant was a journalist and Lowe was a musician. They met at a record store and bonded over their shared love of electronic music.

The duo's early singles were released on independent labels. However, they achieved mainstream success in 1984 with the release of their debut album, Please. The album was a critical and commercial success, and it spawned the hit singles "West End Girls" and "It's a Sin."

The Height of Their Success

Pet Shop Boys continued to release successful albums and singles throughout the 1980s and 1990s. They became one of the most popular pop duos in the world, and they were known for their innovative use of electronic instruments.

Some of their most popular songs from this period include "Always on My Mind," "Domino Dancing," and "Go West." Pet Shop Boys also collaborated with other artists, such as Dusty Springfield and Liza Minnelli.

Recent Years

Pet Shop Boys have continued to release music in recent years. Their most recent album, Hotspot, was released in 2020. The album was a critical and commercial success, and it featured the hit single "Dreamland."

Pet Shop Boys are currently on tour in support of Hotspot. They are scheduled to perform in the United States, Europe, and Asia.

An Interview with Chris Heath

Chris Heath: How did you two meet?

Neil Tennant: We met at a record store in London. I was working there, and Chris came in and we started talking about music. We realized we had a lot in common, so we decided to start making music together.

Chris Heath: What was your inspiration for your music?

Chris Lowe: We were inspired by a lot of different things, including electronic music, pop music, and film. We wanted to create music that was both catchy and intelligent.

Chris Heath: What are your plans for the future?

Neil Tennant: We're just going to keep making music. We love what we do, and we're not going to stop anytime soon.
